New Screen Magazine

No. 83

THE Canada Jay has earned the title of Camp Robber. He is a champion thief and there is very little food that he cannot manage to steal. He stores up his pantry, too, for the winter-time.

A paradox of nature is boiling water with cold water. When a vessel containing boiling water is corked, steam occupies all available space, pressing on the water and preventing bubbling. Cold water condenses the steam, restoring sufficient space to resume the boiling action.

The story of the diamond is a fascinating one. In its original form the diamond is a dull, lifeless affair, far different from the sparkling gems that are actually worn. The cutting of the diamond is a costly and careful process, requiring exquisite skill. Some diamond cutters work only one hour a day and receive a stipend of $300 weekly.

There is an animated called "Cinema Magic" and a collection of jokes entitled "With the Wise Birds" in this issue of the magazine.
